Excerpt: . . . tetanic spasms were produced by none of the numerous substances with which we experimented, except veratrine and theine. It is of course well known that other agents, and notably some of the constituents of opium, produce tetanus in frogs; but on the whole our experiments lead us to hope that this test will hereafter be found of more value than is now generally supposed to be the case. We have devoted a considerable number of experiments to the solution of the practical question, whether it be possible to obtain the characteristic effects of digitaline, not only from the extracts of liquids to which it had been artificially added, but also from extracts of the stomach-contents and vomited matters of dogs poisoned by that substance. The results of these experiments were perfectly satisfactory; and we think that our observations show conclusively that there is no...
